United Fund Soars Toward Industry Goal

Otto Grupp Reports
Collection Is Near Halfway Mark

Soliciting teams in the Industrial Division of the Bucks County United Community Fund have already reached 40 per cent of their quota in Lower Bucks County, four days after the Lower Bucks drive was kicked off.

Collections reported to Industrial Division Chairman Otto Grupp, 3d, by his group at a meeting at the Keystone Hotel, Bristol, yesterday totaled $150,500 in donations and pledges for 1957. The Division goal is $300,000.

Support
"We are extremely encouraged," Mr. Grupp commented. "It looks as if the companies and the workers are behind us as never before."

With goals totaling $480,000 of the Bucks county $630,000 quota to meet the needs of 17 Red Feather agencies next year, all Lower Bucks divisions are hard at work mapping and carrying out their drives. The campaign got underway Monday night and will continue through October.

Calling for continued hard work and generous response to achieve the division goal, Mr. Grupp said the Industrial drive is now "in the Yanks looking now like the other clubs used to look. The Dodgers should take the whole business in four; chances are it'll go five.

That game yesterday probably one of the sloppiest in World Series history.

And Walter Winchell's debut as TV entertainer last night about the floppiest.

We've been saying it all along and we say it again: the keyhole boys should stick to their hit-skip subway-trade writings and let the legitimate entertainers do the entertaining.

Court-martial sentence of Sergeant McKeon drastically reduced by Secretary of Navy Thomas who gives the ex-drill master another chance for "an honorable career" in the Marines.

Not at all unexpected, that reversal of judgment, and perhaps the proper one. As it turned out, McKeon wasn't so much on trial as was the Marine Corps itself.

Weekend weather looks okay.

Nicest thing you can do for yourself before the first of the week is to take a leisurely drive around rural Bucks county. Foliage simply the prettiest of any in the whole land.

Wonder how they manage to make those shoestrings that never break until you're in a hurry?

What this country needs is a nickel that's good for five cents' worth.

If we could see ourselves as others see us, we'd never speak to 'em again.

If you're driving during the weekend, be careful.

Go to church tomorrow.

Fire, roaring out of control, lights up the inside of the Winder mansion as firemen try in vain to bring the flames under control.

The house, valuable furniture and books were destroyed in the inferno which started about 9 o'clock last night.

Andalusia Fire Destroys Old Show Place

By GORDON PARKER
Courier and Times Staff Writer

The 87-year-old Winder mansion, once-famous Andalusia show-place, was destroyed last night by a $100,000 fire that swept through all 30 rooms of the four story building.

The fire started around 9 p.m. and spread rapidly through the vacant home located on Route 13 just about a quarter mile east of Hulmeville road.

Nearly 200 firemen from seven Lower Bucks County fire companies battled in vain to save the building. By 1 a.m. when the inferno was brought under control, little was left but the brick and stone walls. Firemen poured an estimated one million gallons of water into the house.

Though the house had been unoccupied since 1953, it was fully furnished with antiques. Numerous valuable leather bound volumes, including several first editions, were destroyed by the relentless flames along with everything else in the building.

During the height of the blaze, flames crackled from every window in the huge structure, lighting the sky for miles.

Though no one was seriously injured at the scene the fire was indirectly responsible for an automobile accident injuring three persons.

William Dettmer, 19, of 6266 Clearview avenue, Bensalem township, a member of the Newport Fire Company, was injured when his automobile crashed with another on Hulmeville road. Dettmer was racing to the firehouse at the time.

He was admitted to Lower Bucks County hospital for observation. The hospital reported he apparently suffered only minor injuries but will be examined further.

Two others were injured in the other car. They are Thomas Carr Jr., 43, and Thomas Carr 3d, 14, of Bristol R. D. 2. Both were released from the hospital after treatment.

Another unidentified fireman was sent home after he stepped into a swarm of bees at the fire. The Bucks County Rescue Squad

Ike Delivers Talk Today About Draft

President Defends
H-Bomb Tests As Necessary To Peace

WASHINGTON — UP — President Eisenhower today wound up for the second part of a one-two punch against Adlai Stevenson's draft and H-bomb proposals.

The President last night accused the Democratic presidential nominee of creating confusion by proposing the halting of U.S. H-bomb tests.

Moreover, the President said banning the tests might enable Russia to nullify "our present commanding lead in the field of nuclear weapons."

The White House issued Mr. Eisenhower's statement, elaborating a stand he took only a few hours earlier at a news conference. Mr. Eisenhower was scheduled to issue another statement sometime today attacking Stevenson's proposal to review the need for continuing the draft.

Regrets Issue
The President expressed regret in his H-Bomb statement that the issue was injected into the election campaign.

"The proposals clearly take no account of the result of stopping our tests," he said. "Tests of large weapons, by any nation, may be detected when they occur."

"But any such test follows many months of research and preparation. This means elaborate tests could be prepared by a nation without our knowledge."

Bristol Man Enters Plea

A Bristol man and two of seven others charged with conspiracy to operate an illegal still pleaded not guilty yesterday before Federal Judge Phillip Forman, in Trenton.

The Bristol man is Joseph Belardo of 1800 Wilson avenue, Bristol. The other two are Joseph V. Zacccone, former attorney in Ewing township, N. J., and Joseph Schiarelli, of 4 Dodge drive, Trenton.

The other five have yet to enter pleas. Indictments have been returned against all eight by a Federal Grand Jury. They are accused of conspiring to operate a still near Cassville, N. J., in 1953.

Though authorities never actually found a still at Cassville, Assistant U. S. Attorney John D. Wooley says there is ample evidence of its existence.

Suez Debate Takes Recess

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — UP — Western diplomats today expressed hope "secret" sessions of the U.N. Security Council might open the way for a negotiated settlement of the Suez Canal dispute.

They said the closed-door meetings, suggested by Britain and endorsed by the United States, could provide Egypt with the opportunity for presenting any proposals it might have for settling the international controversy.

The council was in recess until Monday. At yesterday's opening session in the debate on the crisis precipitated by Egypt's seizure of the strategic 101-mile waterway, Britain and France put before the council a resolution seeking endorsement of the Western plan for international control of the canal.

Yale Gentlemen Hurl Tomatoes At Adlai

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — UP — Adlai E. Stevenson hit the road to bid for New England votes today on the heels of the first reported tomato throwing incident of his 1956 campaign.

The Democratic presidential candidate mapped a motorcade through Rhode Island and Massachusetts after a one-night stand in Connecticut which almost turned into a giant "We Like Ike" demonstration.

Stevenson opened his current New England swing last night at New Haven, where he delivered a speech at Yale University.

Audience Cries "Ike"
Chants of "We Like Ike" greeted the candidate when he reached the campus. There were boos and cries "Go back to Princeton," Stevenson's alma mater and Yale's bitter rival.

After he spoke to a sympathetic audience of more than 2,800 in Woolsey Hall, Stevenson walked out to the steps of the hall to talk to the several thousand chanting students and townspeople.

Recalls Russian Visit
"Surely students at Yale don't need a lesson in manners from a Princetonian," Stevenson told the crowd.

There were a few cheers, but more boos.

After several attempts at talking, Stevenson finally got silence with an appeal that the crowd quiet down. He then recalled that 30 years ago last night, he was in Russia, and he had vivid impressions of his visit.

"One of the things I remember most acutely was that there were no public meetings like this," he said. "Good night."

Then he pushed through the crowd to his car and drove to the airport to fly to Providence, where he scheduled a city hall plaza rally today.

During the Yale melee, it was reported that a tomato thrown from the crowd splattered on the inside of the convertible Stevenson rode in, missing the candidate. A reporter said a tomato glanced off his coat.

County JP's Censure Holly

Twenty members of the Bucks County Magistrates Association have called for an "official censure" of Middletown township Justice of the Peace Frederick A. Holly, for his public criticism of arrests on view.

In a prepared statement, JP John Melvin, Fallsington, said the 20 magistrates included B. Frank Brunner, of Doylestown, president of the county association.

Melvin said the group, which discussed recent statements by Holly at a special meeting, "were surprised" at his "ignorance of the law." They added that they disagreed with his conclusions.

Holly early this week said it was illegal for township or borough police officers to arrest a motorist "on the spot" for a violation of the motor vehicle code. He also rapped justices of the peace who fined motorists arrested in such manner. He said the situation could develop into a "fining mill."

Melvin in his statement said the group unanimously disagreed with Holly and cited a court case which upheld the right to arrest and fine an out-of-state motorist on the spot.

STAESVILLE, N. C. — UP — The U. S. District Court here received a $20 check from a man under probation for a federal liquor law violation. The check was made out to the "U. S. Eternal Revenue Office."

McKeon Jail Term Reduced

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C. — UP — S-Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon has received a big reduction in his "death march" court martial sentence, including a chance to stay in the Marine Corps.

Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas late yesterday overruled a bad conduct discharge that a court martial board handed the 27-year-old drill sergeant for the march that killed six recruits.

Thomas decreed that McKeon be broken to private but reduced his hard-labor sentence from nine to three months. He also abolished a $30 monthly pay forfeiture, saying the reduction in rate would incur a greater pay loss than this.

Thomas said he believes the "real punishment" will be the "memory of those youngsters" who drowned in a night march into a tidal creek last April 8.

Today Is National Newspaper Carrier Boy Day - - - See Page 3

Courier and Times carrier boy, Leonard Palermo, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Palermo, 1426 Farragut avenue, Bristol, is carrying out his daily duty of promptly delivering the news to your doorstep. He, like all the 400 carrier boys for the Bristol Courier and the Levittown Times, are trained in promptness, neatness, and all-around courtesy.

Leonard collects from Charles Brodi, 1427 Pond street, Bristol. Carrier boys have the opportunity to learn many worthwhile skills, traits, and habits while earning their own money. The youths are taught money-handling, how to get along well with many people from all walks of life, and how to manage as an adult.

Leonard studies a micro-slide from his chemistry set at home after working hours. Because of the excellent training given to carrier boys, they naturally develop worthwhile interests that may develop into their life-time careers. Interests such as Leonard's, help his grades at school.

In full dress uniform, Leonard displays his parade stiffness he uses when drilling with the Robert W. Bracken American Legion Post Junior Drum and Bugle Corps. Many carrier boys have similar interests in their community, county, and state. Early interest in civic-affairs is fostered by their everyday awareness of the news and its significance. The staff of the Courier and Times congratulates its carrier boys on this, National Carrier Boy Day. (Courier and Times photos)

8 'Potential Murderers' Convicted In Brink's Job

Victim Wins $6000 For Car Injuries

The former owner of the Fair Oaks tavern, Pennell, yesterday was ordered to pay $6000 to William C. Phillips, 237 Elmwood avenue, Feasterville, as recompense for bodily injuries. Phillips was severely injured when he was riding in Harry L. Ellis' car on the night of July 30, 1955. He suffered multiple fractures of facial bones, a broken elbow, a fractured pelvis, and had all his teeth knocked out. His medical expenses alone were over $1800.

Files Against Two
Phillips brought civil action against Ellis, who now lives in Pennell, and Joseph C. Elder, 423 Bath road, Bristol township, whose car was hit by Ellis'. However, a civil court jury absolved Elder of any responsibility and placed the entire $6000 compensation on Ellis.

The accident happened about 10 p.m. shortly after Ellis and Phillips left the Fair Oaks tavern, which Ellis then owned, for a "business trip" to Bristol.

Ellis was driving a new Lincoln convertible owned by Mrs. Helen Greenberg. It was destroyed.

Contradictions
During the three-day trial, there was much contradictory testimony as to what events immediately preceded the accident and how it actually happened.

Phillips testified that as he and Ellis were driving toward Bristol on Bath road, he bent over to light a cigar and glanced up again as Ellis hit the Elder car.

Ellis testified that as he passed Newportville and Bath roads, he overtook the Elder car. "Elder was going at a very low rate of speed, and as I started to pass, he began to make a left turn (in front of Ellis) and we collided," he said.

Claims Signal
Ellis claimed he blew his horn before attempting to pass and Elder gave no warning he was going to turn.

Elder testified that he heard no horn before the accident and that he had his directional signals on because he was preparing to turn into his driveway.

A neighbor, George Hite, verified that he saw Elder's signals as Elder passed his house.

Clinic Board Meeting Slated

The Planned Parenthood Clinic of Bucks county will hold its Fall board meeting at noon, Thursday, Oct. 11, at the clinic in Fallsington.

The clinic is in operation every Monday night from 6:30 to 8:30 o'clock. A nurse administrator is present every Thursday morning from 9:30 to 11:30 to answer questions arising in prospective parents' minds.

Mrs. John Eckleberry is president of the board; Mrs. Paul Hutchings, vice president; Mrs. Ethel Rosemont, secretary, and Mr. Parker McAdoo, treasurer.

Rainy Weekend Called For Bucks

Lower Bucks faces a weekend of intermittent rain, cooler temperatures and increasing cloudiness today.

The Weather Bureau said a cold front was swinging through the state from Canada and would probably reach eastern counties by tomorrow afternoon. Coupled with the cold front was a warm, moist air flow from New England which was expected to cause intermittent rain tonight over eastern Pennsylvania.

Smoking Ruins of Mansion

Smoke pours from the ruins of the once proud Winder Mansion on Route 13, Andalusia. Nearly 200 firemen fought hours to put out the fire that caused an estimated $100,000 damage.

Fire Ruins Winder Mansion And Valuable Old Editions

took him home. The squad reported he had five or six bee stings on his leg.

Firemen remained throughout the night playing water on the ruins to check a few sputtering licks of flame.

The house is owned by two brothers and a sister—William, of 9 Post lane, Levittown, and Lawrence Winder, of Andalusia, and Mrs. Irene Brodich, of 1515 Bristol pike. Mrs. Brodich is the wife of Dr. William Brodich, a dentist.

Vacant

The house has been empty since the death of the mother. However, Mrs. Brodich has made a daily check on the building. She lives about a block from it.

Firemen couldn't determine the cause of the fire immediately but they said it might have been started by children playing in the home.

Mrs. Brodich pointed out that vandals had broken into the mansion on frequent occasions and had greatly damaged fixtures and furniture.

Mrs. Brodich was unable to estimate the value of the house and furnishings but several firemen and neighbors familiar with the building, said the loss was at least $100,000.

No Knowledge

Mrs. Brodich also said she didn't know if it was insured. She pointed out that her mother's estate has not been settled and everything is in the hands of the lawyers.

The fire was spotted by Mrs. Benhardt Brodich, next door neighbor and sister-in-law to Dr. and Mrs. Brodich.

She said she was returning from shopping between 9 and 9:30 p.m. when she noticed flames at the mansion. She explained the flames were in the lower part of the house. At first, she said, she thought the shrubs and brush were burning.

Notified

She immediately notified Dr. and Mrs. Brodich. Dr. Brodich said he called in the alarm but as he telephoned he heard the alarm go off.

Activities were directed by the Eddington Fire Company. Benjamin Hughes, Eddington chief, was in charge during the early hours.

CD Course Set At Neshaminy

A four-week radiological course will start 8 p.m. Monday at the Neshaminy High school under the sponsorship of the Lower Bucks County Civil Defense Council.

Patrick J. Foley, county sanitarian, will be the instructor. Foley was attached to the Radiological service of the State of California for a number of years.

The course is open to any interested resident of the area. The council sponsoring it represents Middletown township, and the boroughs of Pennell, Hulmeville, Langhorne, and Langhorne Manor.

part of the fire, but he left later. He turned the job over to Frank Cahoon, first assistant chief.

Other companies which responded and stayed throughout the night were: Union of Cornwells Heights, Cornwells, Trevoise, Newport, Newportville, and Crofton. The Philadelphia fire department offered assistance.

Five 1500-gallon tank trucks shuttled between the scene and Philadelphia carrying water. Each truck made between eight and 10 trips, according to William Thomas, second assistant chief of the Eddington company. He estimated the trucks carried nearly 750,000 gallons.

In addition he said, water was pumped directly from a creek off Gravel road, a distance of about a mile-and-a-half, which would put the total over 1,000,000 gallons.

Besides the fire companies, the Bucks County Rescue Squad and the Bristol Emergency Squad stood by. The Second Alarmers, from Willow Grove arrived about 11 p.m. and provided coffee and doughnuts for the firemen.

Winder Home Was Pride Of Andalusia

The Winder mansion, destroyed in a raging inferno last night, was the pride of Andalusia residents for nearly a century.

Built shortly after the Civil War in 1869 by wealthy railroad contractor Charles McFadden, it soon became a landmark of sight-seers.

It was a sturdy built house, with walls of brick and stone 18 inches thick. The bricks were ordered from England and brought to Philadelphia by ship. From there they were brought by barge up the river to Andalusia.

At first it was used solely as a summer house by Mr. McFadden, who had a "town house" in Philadelphia. In those times it was almost a day's journey from the city to Andalusia.

But after his death in 1895 it was used all year.

Like his house, Mr. McFadden was fabulous. He laid most of the railroad tracks in the eastern part of the country during the infancy of the now widespread network.

His handiwork and engineering skill can be seen by travelers of the Pennsylvania turnpike. In 1883 he started to blast out tunnels in the mountains of western Pennsylvania for a new railroad. The South Penn.

But the work was halted half way when the Pennsylvania Railroad bought out the South Penn. However, several tunnels were completed. These were later purchased by the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, which widened them and ran the superhighway through.

Mr. McFadden came to the Philadelphia area from Maryland and he designed his Andalusia summer home after his house in the south.

The main part of the house is four floors high.

A tower running up the middle dominates the front of the house. A wing in the rear is three floors high.

There is a total of 30 rooms in the brownish building.

One of the main features is a huge open stair well. Heavy oak beams support the upper floors.

On the fourth floor in front is the tank room. This contains a water tank. Water from a well was pumped into the tank to insure a reserve and steady water pressure. As the water left the tank it was filtered through a special filtering system installed by Mr. McFadden.

In the rear of the house was a room which would have proved a delight to historians — a trunk room. This was a throw-back to the days when the mansion was used solely as a summer house.

About 15 huge trunks were stored in the room. Each was filled with clothes from the 19th century. Mrs. William Brodich, one of the surviving members of the McFadden and Winder families reported she has lent some of the dresses to Bristol Borough schools for their pageant in the 275th anniversary of the borough. The rest of the clothes and trunks were destroyed.

Inheritance

When Mr. McFadden died he left the house and estate to a daughter who had married Dr. Lawrence Winder, grandfather of the present owners.

The house now sits on a 48-acre tract which includes two smaller houses and two farm buildings. One of the houses was used by the chauffeur and the other by the gardener. More recently the second house had been rented as a farm house. All the other buildings are also empty now. They were not even threatened by the flames.

knowledge, our present commanding lead in the field of nuclear weapons could be reduced or even overtaken.

"Thus our power to guard the peace would be weakened," Mr. Eisenhower said he was speaking in his role of "president, charged with responsibility for the defense and security of our nation."

He said he never would sanction any curtailment of U. S. atomic power unless Russia agrees to a foolproof system of international safeguards.

He also said of recent atomic tests in the Pacific, "We have learned to make weapons which reduce fallout to a minimum and whose destructive effect can be concentrated upon military objectives."

Defendants May Receive Life Terms

BOSTON —UP—Eight men, described as "potential murderers," were convicted early today of the million-dollar robbery at Brink's Inc. six years ago.

A Suffolk County jury deliberated three hours and 40 minutes before convicting Joseph McGinnis, Anthony Pino, Vincent J. Costa, Adolph (Jazz) Maffie, Michael V. Geagan, James I. Faherty, Thomas F. Richardson and Henry Baker.

Superior Judge Felix Forte set Tuesday as tentative date for sentencing for the middle-aged men who participated in the greatest cash robbery in the nation's history. They could receive life sentences.

McGinnis, fleshy, pink-faced hoodlum who engineered the armed assault on Brink's was convicted of 36 counts on 11 indictments charging conspiracy, receiving stolen goods and being an accessory.

Other Varied Charges

Charges against the other defendants included armed robbery, burglary and conspiracy.

The verdicts rolled out over the packed courtroom like steady beats from a drum. In answer to the recital of crimes, jury foreman Thomas P. Donahue sounded a monotonous succession of "guiltys."

The defendants sat hypnotized. Pino, his thick neck taut, craned his head toward the jury in apparent disbelief.

McGinnis' wife, Marjorie, gave a sharp cry as the verdicts were handed down. She had to be supported from the courtroom and then fainted near the exit.

Other defendants' wives wept quietly while streams of court officials rushed to congratulate prosecution attorneys.

Mrs. Mary Pino, a large shapeless woman, sunk her head in the huge folds of a black dress. She shook her head and cried "Tony, Tony."

The case, longest criminal trial in Massachusetts court history, went to the jury at 10:05 p.m. (EDT) yesterday. Verdicts were returned at 1:45 a.m. (EDT).

The conviction ended nine weeks of trial with 4,800 pages of transcript and more than a million words of testimony.

At Meeting

Also meeting with the Industrial Division members were George E. Otto, United Fund president who said he was gratified by the response. Mrs. Edward Linforth, vice president for Lower Bucks, Adrian Hoffman, executive director, John Spadaccino, labor staff representative, Jesse Daugherty, assistant campaign chairman for the AFL-CIO, and Olivia Miller, publicity director.

Division workers and company representatives attending and reporting included Harold M. Caldwell, co-chairman for the smaller industries; W. B. McCluer, of Rohm and Haas Co.; Stephen Westaby, U. S. Steel Corp.; Udo Fisher and R. A. Nelson, Schutte and Koerting Co.; Robert Ruel, Jr., Makelield Co.; and Joseph Sully, Pomeroy's department store.

Nearly All

Mr. Grupp said solicitation drives are already underway in about 90 per cent of the 92 industries and large businesses of his division.

Mr. Spadaccino and Mr. Daugherty reported they have been addressing employe groups on the United Fund drive throughout the week.

On Increase

The number of industries using the payroll savings plan for systematic contributions to the United Fund has increased. Mr. Grupp said. Among those starting it this year are the Stephens-Leedom Co., the Bristol Printing Co. and the Eddington Metal Specialty Co.

Mr. Grupp called an additional meeting of his Division members next Friday, when he hopes the drive will be nearly completed. The Industrial drive is timed to end before October 17, the start of the Residential solicitation.
